

Additions to the Selected Bibliography for the Art of Ancient Iran

SUSAN JAYE PATTULLO
Columbia University

At my request, Susan Pattullo kindly assembled a number of essential titles missing from my bibliography printed in JANES 9 (1977), 67–84. Her list had been considerably larger and included a great number of site reports which I thought that I had covered by the blanket references to the "Survey of Excavations" printed in the journal Iran since Vol. 5, 1967, and to Peter Calmeyer's "Archäologische Bibliographie," in which the section "Fundorte" (since Vol. 7, 1974) provides nearly complete coverage of current excavation reports.

To print any such references here, however, seemed superfluous after a glance at the complete listings for the various sites in the monumental Bibliographie analytique de l'archéologie de l'Iran by Louis Vanden Berghe to be published by E. J. Brill in Leiden in July 1979.

The additions cited here are therefore limited to the above mentioned group of very important and useful works left out before and to a selection of new reports and articles that were published in 1978 and in the first months of 1979 and that are not included in Vanden Berghe's Bibliographie, which was terminated in 1977. Several of these new titles were contributed by Prudence O. Harper, Ann Farkas, and Holly Pittman.

The journal Iranica Antiqua, edited by Vanden Berghe, resumed publication in 1978. It is unavailable to us as yet, but students' attention should be drawn to it as well as to the forthcoming reports of the VIIIth International Congress of Iranian Art and Archaeology held in Munich in September 1976.

The abbreviations used in this bibliography are the same as those used in the bibliography published in 1977, pp. 67–68.

We are grateful that the editors of JANES are willing to publish these bibliographical items, which make no claim to completeness but are merely intended to guide students to the most useful and important writings pertaining to the art of Iran.—Edith Porada
